	El presente trabajo intenta demostrar el papel fundamental que juega el cambio estructural en el crecimiento económico y en el desarrollo humano en un país. Para ello se analizara la estructura productiva de un grupo de países que se caracteriza por sus niveles generalizados de pobreza y la creciente desigualdad en la distribución de la renta. Por eso la comunidad internacional se comprometió a través de los Objetivos de Desarrollo del Milenio (ODM) eliminar el círculo vicioso de la pobreza en los países subdesarrollados. Ocho objetivos, ocho ilusiones y ocho deseos que todos tenemos que realizar cada día para vivir en un mundo un poco mejor. En la actualidad, existen 48 países menos adelantados que han registrado, a partir del milenio, altas tasas de crecimiento económico. El objetivo de este trabajo es analizar si el crecimiento, la reducción de la pobreza y el aumento del empleo han sido impulsados por el cambio estructural de sus economías. Asimismo, examinar si existe una relación entre los países que han logrado transformar sus economías y el grado de consecución de los ODM Así como el papel fundamental del sector público en incentivar el cambio..
