	Socially responsible investment is commonly unknown within the range of possibilities that financial institutions offer their clients to invest their capital. Socially responsible investment or SRI is very related to Corporate Social Responsibility as the last one provides the environmental, social and ethical assets in which investments can be made. Nowadays there are several investment alternatives available for both clients and investment companies, and this final degree project is focused mainly on socially responsible funds. Thus, this paper analyses the investment alternatives inside socially responsible investment, the various strategies used by SRI fund managers to select in which assets to invest, the performance of these funds compared to regular funds and, finally, the current Spanish situation of SRI funds.
